Target Group:

We invite graduates from universities of applied sciences and universities in the fields of social sciences, economics, natural science, humanities, engineering, law, geography or with comparable degrees to apply to our program. Furthermore people with work experience in Development Cooperation, Humanitarian Aid or the non-profit sector in general who are interested in learning Project Evaluation are highly welcomed to apply.

Please consider that the field of international project Evaluation requires high mobility, flexibility and the ability to work under pressure. Also suitable for refugees and migrants with a university degree. Language skills: German B1, English B1 (aim to reach B2/C1)

Organizations and institutions of international cooperation, development cooperation and humanitarian aid / assistance looking for people who are not only competent in the respective project focus (e.g. economics, forestry, agriculture, gender, law, etc.), but at the same time also have in-depth knowledge of project management and are explicitly familiar with financial and project management.

The focus of the program is the preparation of the participants for complex and challenging work in global institutions for development cooperation and humanitarian assistance, companies (“Public-Private-Partnership“) and international operating NGOs.

Goals of the Training:

In the theoretical and practical lessons, participants will learn how to use the concepts and methods of Evaluation of projects in the field of development cooperation (DC) and humanitarian aid (HA).

At the end of the training, graduates have in-depth knowledge of M&E with according tools and are qualified to write and operationalize Terms of References conduct an Evaluation and submit a report.

Professions:

To measure the impact of development projects and humanitarian aid projects evaluations are necessary and the focus on impact measuring has grown in the past decades, especially in the frame of UN development goals.

As evaluations are complex, specified experts are needed to conduct them, either as staff members of NGOs, GIZ or other organisations in the area of development and humanitarian aid or as self-employed consultants answering to tenders for evaluation.

Training Procedure:

The duration of the training is 7 months in total.

Parts of the program will be conducted in collaboration with lecturers from the University of Kassel and the DITSL (German Institute for Tropical and Subtropical Agriculture). Lecturers include professionals from internationally operating institutions and companies. These lecturers also provide a direct contact to the future working environment. Parts of the program will be held in conjunction with the participants of the training course “International Project Management”.

A successful access to the job market will be assisted by application trainings and assessment center training and furthermore by an internship in selected institutions and companies.
